

New Zealanders' preferences are a kumara and pavlova. Whereas Australia consumes in a great quantity of a Sally lun or ANZAC biscuits and a 'treacle-like' golden syrup. The following amber-coloured sugar syrup with a similar appearance to honey is used in a variety of baking recipes, desserts. At first it was produced by Charles Eastick in 1883 but marketed commercially in 1885 as 'golden syrup'. However, the name 'golden syrup' (in honour of its colour and consistency) in connection with molasses occurs with a slogan 'Out of the strong came forth sweetness' as early as 1840 in an Adelaide newspaper, the South Australia. It is interesting to know that the slogan was a reference to the Biblical story in chapter 14 of the Book of Judges in which Samson was travelling to the land of the Philistines in quest of a wife. During the journey he killed a lion, and when he passed the same spot on his return he noticed that a swarm of bees had formed a comb of honey in the carcass. Presently, you can see at any stores a tin of this syrup bearing a picture of the rotting carcass of a lion with a swarm of bees in commemoration of the legend. Surprisingly but there is a certainty that the golden Australian syrup was awarded a Royal Warrant in 1911.

England is a country which gives the world highly qualified certified specialists. The educational system of the country is inherited and adapted in different countries. The British diplomas are accepted in 50 countries around the world. All this attracts a tendency of active arrival of foreign pupils in England. One of the most available opportunities to enter the elite university is study on an exchange in England.

Every year more than half a million students come to the UK for new knowledge from all countries. Many schools, colleges and universities of the United Kingdom are participating in the international exchange of students. They organize a variety of activities which aim to create a friendly atmosphere among children from different countries. Studying on the exchange includes a variety of programs in England.

The main of them is called the Study and Internship. This program is designed for those adults and students who want to combine unpaid labor training and English language training. The program is held in college. The first stage of training is to increase knowledge of the English language with parallel practical activities. At the end students receive a diploma which indicates successful completion of the program and giving proof of qualification level 3 on the National Comprehensive training program. The internship involves temporary employment in many areas of medicine, architecture, management, trade, finance, etc.

I think it's a great opportunity because British authorities and educational structures strongly support foreigners, giving them the opportunity to study in England for various exchange programs. Exchange program in England is the most promising for the person the opportunity to study in the United Kingdom, to find a job and live in it in the future.

When you get tired of the routine, you want something unusual. Therefore, there are many options to go to England for the exchange. This travel option gives you freedom of movement, a roof over your head, language practice and meet new people. So if there is a possibility it is necessary to try.

American culture began to develop more before the United States became a nation. British, as well as Ireland, Germany, Poland, Italy cultures influenced its early formation.

Americans celebrate a lot of holidays such as New Year's Day, Martin Luther King Day, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Day, Mother's Day, Father's Day, Easter, St. Valentine's Day, Halloween and St. Patrick's Day. Memorial Day is celebrated on the last day of May. This day was proclaimed as a national holiday in 1971 by President Nixon. This day of remembrance of all the American soldiers who died in all wars. Columbus Day is celebrated on the second Monday of October. This day is dedicated to the Italian explorer Christopher Columbus. The main ceremony is held in New York, where you can see a huge parade. St. Patrick's Day is celebrated on March 17.

Also every year, when the corn stalks rise to the sky and the leaves turn yellow, people in the United States often come to the farms to visit the autumn festivals. Most of the activities at these festivals are family. You can ride a cart, choose pumpkins, walk through the maze of corn, play with pets in the yard. But what really singles out some of these autumn events, is the desire of visitors to watch how pumpkins are blown up in the air and flung at long distances [1].

There is another tradition. When Americans attend sporting events (especially football matches), they do not simply come in and take their seats – they should arrive in a few hours to properly prepare for game watching. Painted by the colours of favorite sports teams, people hang out near their cars at the parking lot of the stadium, fry food on the grill, sipping cold drinks and play on the lawn, throwing each other footballs.

Ireland is known as the country of legends and fairy tales. It is often called the 'land of saints and scholars' referring to the golden age of monastic learning, or 'the emerald isle' referring to the green landscape. Ireland's culture is rich in a large number of customs and national traditions.

Ireland was converted to Christianity by Saint Patrick in the V century. Thanks to it, one of the most important and main holidays is St. Patrick's Day. It is celebrated every year on March 17. The celebration of this day is a special event for Irish. People on this holiday put on green clothes which symbolize ancient Gaelic traditions of Ireland, arrange parties with music and dances. Each Irish dance is a certain work of art. Dance is a peculiar feature of Irish and visible in everything.

The Irish national music is very various: from lullabies to drinking songs, from slow instrumental melodies to
